NATIONAL STANDARDS FOR UNDER EIGHTS DAY CARE AND CHILDMINDING

Childminding

Department for Education and Employment

Introduction

The Government is committed to promoting the welfare and development of all our young children. Good quality care and education in the early years raise educational standards and opportunities, and enhance children's social development.

The National Childcare Strategy was launched in 1998 to expand childcare services. The Government is determined that all childcare services, be they new or established, provide a secure and safe environment for children, not least so that parents can have confidence that their children are well looked after.

In 1999 the Government announced that in England day care providers and childminders caring for children under the age of eight years old would be regulated by a new Early Years Directorate within the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted).

ABOUT THE NATIONAL STANDARDS

The National Standards represent a baseline of quality below which no provider may fall. However, they are also intended to underpin a continuous improvement in quality in all settings.

There are 14 National Standards. Each Standard describes a particular quality outcome, and is accompanied by a set of supporting criteria giving information about how that outcome is to be achieved. The criteria are matched to each of five different types of day care and childminding provision:

- Full day care;
- Sessional day care;
- Crèches;
- Out of school care;
- Childminders.

In addition, a number of annexes have been attached where appropriate, explaining how the criteria will be applied to overnight care, facilities caring for babies and open access schemes.

Regulations under the Children Act require providers (technically the registered person in each registered setting) to meet the 14 Standards. The regulations also require providers to have regard to the supporting criteria. Ofsted is required to have regard to both the Standards and the supporting criteria, and is responsible for issuing guidance on how the outcomes required by the National Standards may be achieved.

The National Standards do not override the need for providers to comply with other legislation such as that covering health and safety, food hygiene, fire or planning requirements.

The National Standards apply to new childcare providers who have applied to Ofsted for registration after 2 July 2001, and to all other providers with effect from 1 September 2001. The Standards and supporting criteria will be reviewed within two years to ensure that they remain up to date.

The vetting procedure, which includes police checks, will enable the early years child care inspector to determine the suitability of those caring for, or having regular contact with, children. If the registered person fails to comply with such a condition the early years child care inspector may, amongst other things, take this into account in determining their suitability.

Where disqualification arising from an offence carries a time-limit in the regulations, and that time-limit has expired, or where an offence mentioned in the regulations made under schedule 9A was not subject to a qualifying sentence, or where the person is or has been the subject of an order mentioned in the Disqualification for Caring for Children Regulations 1991, in determining the suitability of the registered person the early years child care inspector will have regard to all circumstances of the offence or order. Factors will include the date of offence or order, the type of offence or order, the degree of culpability of the person and the person's activity and involvement with children since the offence or order.
